

Proper Use of Donated Products

Your organization may use donated goods only as direct charitable donations to people in need or for use within your agency's facilities.

Your organization must not sell, trade, barter, or otherwise transfer any donated goods in exchange for money, property, or services. Prohibited transfers include listing the donated goods for sale or trade on websites, in stores, at flea markets, or in any similar manner.

Your organization must not use donated goods for raffles, auctions, or any fundraising activity.

Your organization must not accept anything of value (including voluntary donations) in exchange for the donated goods.

Your organization must not give any donated goods to its volunteers, officers, directors, employees, or contractors for personal use.

Your organization must not return any donated goods to the manufacturer or to any retail store.

Your organization must not give donations to another nonprofit organization or other entity.

Your organization must not redistribute any donated goods to any location outside of the United States (unless MMR Warehouse, through permission of Good360, has given written permission in advance).